

National Professional Qualification for Headship (NPQH)

The National Professional Qualification for Headship (NPQH) is a qualification that provides national recognition of your leadership development and aspiration to move onto headship.

Who can apply?

You should have either completed NPQSL, hold a senior leadership role in a school or education setting, be a serving headteacher or head of school in a federation or MAT. Applicants should have had experience of whole school responsibility and aspire to headship.

Programme outline – ‘Leading a School’

The NPQH programme typically takes up to one year to complete, during which time participants will undertake two school based projects and explore six areas of learning:

- Strategy and improvement
- Teaching and curriculum excellence
- Increasing capacity
- Leading with impact
- Working in partnership
- Managing resources and risk

Projects : NPQH participants will complete two school improvement projects. The first project will be based on work in your own school and the second will be a 9 day placement in another school.

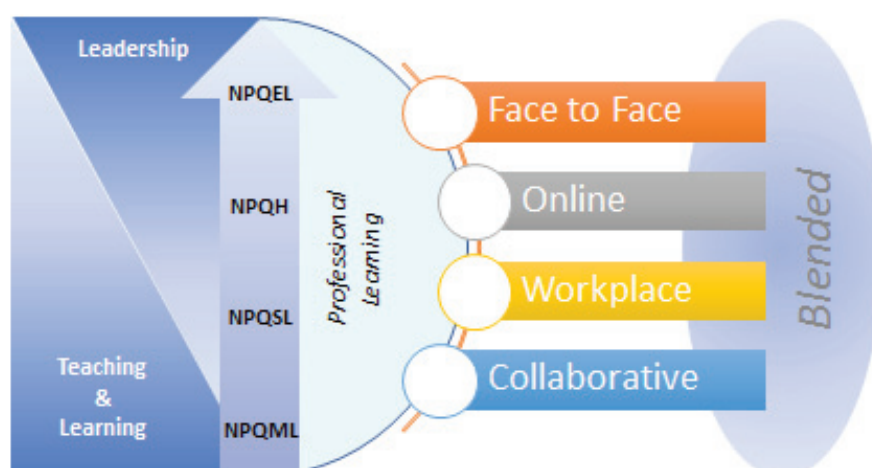

In addition to the six areas of learning, there are also seven leadership behaviours which set out how a leader should operate on a daily basis. These are:

- Commitment
- Collaboration
- Personal drive
- Awareness
- Respect
- Resilience
- Integrity

Programme outline:

Our NPQ programmes are designed around a blended learning approach which incorporates face to face days, online courses and collaborative study.
